TO TRAIN HUSBANDS.

Having read something once regarding the establishment in a northern city of a school for brides, leads us to wonder why no one has thought of establishing a school for young husbands. A lot of young fellows get married who first of all know little or nothing about women and less about their own duties in the home.

The first course in the curriculum of such a school might be devoted to proving to the young man that a fault finder home in a hurry.

There is another thing that might be taught: We have in mind a man who grave of an ex-Confederate soldier is was admired by every woman who knew him, whose wife was the envy of her circle, and who had all the love and devotion in his own home that is good devotion in his own home that is good soldier. We were once enemies but now friends. The long dark night is for one man. He was not much for looks, and he wouldn't set the business world on fire in a thousand years.

So his wife was asked what her hus band possessed that was lacking in other men. "Oh, he is so careful about little things," she replied. "They mean much to a woman. There are a thousand little courtesies too small to name. He thinks of them all. He took off his woman. Some men keep their manners for company. Somehow I know he is sorry for every pain that touches me. If he reads a good book he tells me about it. He brings me an occasional flower, and makes me realize that I'm his chum, just the same as in the beginning. And when he talks to me I realize that he feels that he is talking to an equal. That is about all I can explain. I'm sure of him. There are men who can put more love into a look than others can into a caress and a dozen protestations. He is that kind of a man.'

The little things! Perhaps no school can teach a man their importance, but common sense and association with a being who has glorified his life with her affection should make him a better man and a better husband.

Well, Claude had a run for his money and had some fun if he didn't get many

The liquor leagued press of the country made great boast of the recent Alabama state election on the day succeed ing that event. But these papers were too previous. The actual results show that the new legislature is of the unpurchasably dry variety, and that the state will remain in the dry column indelin

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in session at Asheville, has refused to prohibit its ministers the use of tobacco, thus placing itself on record as opposed to the removal of any of the recognized consolations of religion. By this action the tobacco trust has also secured another and most important moral victory over its enemy-the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Tion, angeness, manneys, ex-paof the Florida House of Representatives at the session of 1907, will again be a member, baving led the ticket in the Bradford county primary last week. Mr. Matthews is one of the best equipped legislators in the entire state, and as a presiding officer he stands without an equal. The session of 1911 could do no better than again place him in this position.

Senator "Jim" Perkins who has just been elected Senator for Volusia county by a good majority over both Alexander and Thornton, will be something more than a mere ornament at the next session of the Fiorida legislature. His friends in various parts of the state are urging Putnam county, through your valuable him to become a candidate for president of the senate and it is more than likely he will consent, in which event other candidates may as well gracefully retire. "Jim" Perkins don't handsome up much, but he has a head full of brains and is all to the good. He would make an impartial presiding officer.

Probably no political race was ever run in Florida which showed the leading candidates so well matched in strength as that of last week for the office of United States Senator. The unofficial returns at the Broward headquarters on Monday night gave Senator Taliaferro a lead of 11 votes in a total of over 42,000. At the Taliaferro headquarters the senator's lead was but 27. Both Ex-Gov. Broward and Senator Taliaferro have stripped for the final heat on June 7th, and the intervening time will see lively politics in Florida. Senator Taliaferro has the active aid of Congressman Frank Clark, the eloquent, and began the agressive work of his campaign with a monster open air meeting at Jacksonville Thursday night Gov. Broward isn't crawling. He leaped into the arena with a vengeance and began his speaking at Tampa. He made early appeal to his friends and they are at work. Let 'em go, Galli- wiping his mouth that would be prima gher, and gosh-durned be he who first cries, Hold; enough!

Claude is non-committal as to his attitude between his successful opponents in the primary. When asked whether he would support Broward or Taliaferro in the final race he said that he "had spent all his money in the campaign and that it would now require his best efforts to SUPPORT his wife and five children.

The enemies of Senator Taliaferro rather have the "horse laugh" on that gentleman when they charge that in the primary two years ago the senator and his friends supported Gov. Broward against Duncan U. Fletcher in his race for the U. S. Senatorship. They say this is the same Broward who was good enough for the senatorship at that time, and that he has grown in mental and moral breadth since.

Commander-in-Chief Van Sant of the Grand Army of the Republic has issued an order to Union veterans of the civil idence brought against her was con war to place flowers on the graves of is a curse and can drive love out of a tormer Confederate soldiers on Memorial day. The order says:

"It is recommended that wherever the as a tribute to the bravery of the man over; at least we are a united people Out of the darkness comes no echo, no strife, no bloodshed, but universal tel lowship lights the lamp to guide the feet of our young republic."

The murder of one policeman and the serious wounding of another at Jackson ville last Friday night at the hands of a saloon-keeper and his desperado son, is but one of the frequent out-croppings of hat in the store when I was the only the ulcer of lawlessness which pervade the entire licensed whisky selling sytem. This saloon-keeper, who paid is aus lawlessness with his life and whoson is a self-confessed murderer, was a violator of the prohibitive features of the license system in vogue in Duval coun ty. He belonged to a class who steadfastly maintain that prohibition does not prohibit-that regulation is the only emedy for the evils of the liquor selling system. And yet he was a violator of the regulating law he professed to uphold-a law that gives standing to the business and lamentably fails to regulate Rather than obey those who were charged with the laws' enforcement be chose murder. This class is growing bolder and bolder with the passage of time, and nothing under heaven will se end to its obliteration as the "Thoshalt not" of absolute prohibition. The state of Florida must assert itself. Either the people or the saloon must rule. A business that stands charged with the responsibility for 85 per cent of the 247 has rejected a bonding proposition crime and much of the pauperism in the state is certainly not entitled to any consideration at the hands of people who respect law and love order. In November next the voters of Florida will have an opportunity to pronounce this liquor business and its direful concomitants of murder, and rape, and arson, and all the lesser crimes an outlaw in our fair state

"As a general thing, yes," she answered, looking up into his eyes with an engaging frankness that threatened havor to his heart, "but," she added hastily as he started to say something pretty, "not any tonight, thank you; it is rather late. The Saving of Patience Godwin

By KATHLEEN J. M'CURDY Copyright, 1910, by American Press

This is the legend of Patience Godwin as it has been handed down in our family for many generations of her descendants. Patience in the days when witcheraft had its grip on Maseachusetts was a young girl. She won the love of Francis Winthrop, who had been attentive to Jane Hartsborne, and Jane for spite accused Patience of being a witch.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the trial, especially because Patience was so well beloved. The ev-

Young Winthrop when his sweet beart had been tried and found guilty said that he could not be present when she was burned, and he would no longer remain in a so called civilized community where such superstitions were rife and such cruelties were practiced. The day before the execution be left the settlement, saving that he would go and live among the Indians His parting with Patience was distress ing in the extreme and would have moved anything but the ironbound consciences of the Puritans. The next day a stake was set up in wood near the settlement and fagots laid about it in preparation for the burning, which was set for the hour of sunset. It was October, and there was a mellow haze in the atmosphere. Shortly before the sun went down the great men of the church and their families began to collect at the place of execution. Presently in the distance appeared a little procession, led by the minister, who read from his Bible as he walked such passages as he thought might exorcise the evil spirit that had got into the poor girl. Patience came next, attended by her weeping parents and a few of her intimate friends.

Now, it is not claimed that what I am about to parrate is a matter of his tory. Detailed accounts of those who perlahed by the witchcraft insanity have been given in histories of the times, but I admit there is no his torical account of this case. It has merely been perpetuated in the family. We must remember that those were a superstitious people, looking always for the marvelous. Yet there is nothing more remarkable in the witch plague than in the story of what happened at Patience Godwin's burning.

The condemned girl bade farewell to ber parents, her brothers and sisters and her friends and with a resigned step approached the stake. She was bound, and the executioner was about to apply the torch to the fagots when the setting sun broke through a cloud and flooded the scene with a yellow splendor. A glory from heaven seemed to be poured upon the trees, whose leaves still wore the autumnal colors, the group standing about the stake and lit the face of the witch, giving a holy glow to her pale features.

And then out of the western sunlight there came a figure dressed in a long white robe walking slowly Whether man or woman none could sny, for the long hair failing on the shoulders gave the figure a feminine appearance, while a sword pressed by the right hand against a large blood red cross on the breast seemed to indicate manhood. As the visitor drew near the face was seen to be white as marble, and a soft brown beard could be distinguished.

As the man or specter or god, flooded by the yellow light, which every moment took on more effulgence, ap proached those about the stake knelt with bowed heads. Reaching the witch, he said in a voice soft, but distinet: "Come out, Satan!"

Then it seemed to those who saw that Patience writhed for a moment. after which her face shone with a holy light. Raising his sword, the apparltion out the rose that bound her; then taken a second by away in the direction from which he had come.

Some say that the two figures were lost in a snowstorm that suddenly came up from the east, giving a still The cheerful countenance of a defeatmore wonderful appearance to the western illumination as seen through the falling flakes.

I have examined the records of the weather for the year in question and found mention of a terrible snowstorm that covered Massachusetts to a great depth, falling on verdure that had not get been blighted.

The legend says that Patience and the stranger were seen walking through this snowstorm in a gradually lessening illumination, darkness finally enveloping them.

Patience never returned to Massachusetts, but after the witch craze had passed she was known to be living in Maryland, the wife of Francis Winthrop. Who the mysterious stranger was has never been definitely settled. In Massachusetts most people believed that it was either the Saviour or St. John. But in the family inheriting the legend it has been supposed that he was none other than Francis Winthrop, who went away immediately before the execution for the purpose of working on the superstitions of the people and thus saving the girl be loved.

It was not long after this that the witchcraft ballucination died out, and the people of Massachusetts wondered what had possessed them. That branch of the Godwin family to which Patience belonged naturally found a more congenial social atmosphere in the south than among the colder blooded

HEIGHT OF ELEPHANTS.

In the Majority of Cases It is Under Eight Feet.

The average term of an elephant's life, although there is no precise information on the point, is seventy or eighty years. The elephant is not in full vigor and strength till thirty-five. The most ready way of forming an approximate idea of the age is by the amount of turnover of the upper edge of the ear. In young animals, sometimes up to the age of eight or nine years, the edge is quite straight. It, however, then begins to turn over, and by the time the animal is thirty the edges inp over to the extent of an inch, and between this age and sixty this increases to two inches or slightly Extravagant ideas are held as to the height of an elephant. Such a thing as an elephant measuring ten feet at the shoulder does not exist in India or Burma. Sanderson, an admitted authority on the subject, said the largest male he ever met with measured nine feet ten inches and the tallest female eight feet five inches. The majority of elephants, however, are below eight feet, and an animal rarely reaches nine feet, the female being slightly shorter than the male. The carcass of an elephant seven feet four inches tall weighed in portions gave a total weight of 3,000 pounds, so an elephant weighing two tons should be common enough. The skin was about three-fourths of an inch thick.

Kind Words Mean Much.

Cultivate kindness of heart; think well of your fellow men; look with charity upon the shortcomings in their lives. Do a good turn for them as opportunity offers and, finally, don't for get the kind word at the right time. How much a word of kindness, encouragement or appreciation means to others sometimes and how little it costs us to give it. We do not need to wait for some special occasion When calamity overtakes a friend words of sympathy and encouragement are offered sincerely enough, yet in certain respects as a matter of course Such an occasion calls for expression on our part, and we naturally respond But why wait for occasion? Why not speak the kind word when there is no special occasion?

The Roman Senate.

The Roman senate had for many centuries but 300 members, selected from the patricians, or aristocrats The office of senator was for life. The body was practically supreme in matters of legislation and administration. The majority of votes decided a question, and the order in which the voting took place was invariably determined by rank, beginning with the president and ending with the quastors. The senators were on their tunical a broad purple stripe-a badge of dis tinction, like a modern decorationand they had the exclusive right of precedence at theaters, the amphithea ter and all other public gatherings.

When Fashions Lasted For Years. In times past a fashion insted with slight modifications for years. Much the same fashion continued through the long reign of Louis XIV, and another through that of Louis XV., while the ladies of the middle ages never thought of varying their costumes. As for the Greeks and the Romans, generation succeeded generation with little change in female dress, and yet all these ladies of the past were more artistically dressed than those of today, Many no doubt spent more than they could afford, but when they had a costly dress they kept it and did not throw it away to replace it with another.-London Truth,
